About the press conference:

The event will introduce our two-year project which will involve the use of the Participatory Theatre Debate Format. There will be citizens’ workshops and theatre debates in four countries (Italy, Cyprus, Germany and Greece), involving young people, politicians, artists and civil society organisations. There will also be a co-created international theatre debate session in Brussels, presenting the results of the national debates to members of the European Parliament. This innovative approach aims to engage youth in democratic discussions on key issues such as environmental sustainability and European governance.

The format will serve as a platform for meaningful dialogue between citizens, politicians, and policy makers, and will attempt to address some key issues in youth participation in European democracies.

Key speakers will include representatives from the consortium partners for this CERV project, local stakeholders, and participants in the project, sharing insights on the project's goals, vision, and expected outcomes.
